Our family has lived in WoodsEdge exactly five years this month. Half a decade! A lot can change in five years, and a lot doesn't. What has changed is some of the neighbors and friends we've made here over time. Memories such as the fun, good-bye dinner we shared before our neighbors moved back to their home in Germany, or our neighbors from China, who would help take our groceries in or entertain with a spontaneous song belted out on a saxophone! Interesting neighbors. Helpful neighbors. An incredible variety of cultures and all ages - from near and far - but all calling WoodsEdge home. Some are here for many years, some for just a few.

What doesn't change is that WoodsEdge is a home...a place we always look forward to pulling into whether after a day at work, a long trip or busy day at school. Over five years we've come to know a well-managed place with a responsive office and skilled maintenance department.

Over five years you come to look forward to the annual traditions too. They include the change of the lighting at the entrance during the holidays to red and green, the fall pumpkins and hay stacks and Amy in her costume at Halloween. Others include the first spring mow of the grass, or the first day the pool opens. You see the first day of school tradition, with the nervous but excited children waiting at the Club House for their bus. Who doesn't love the row of trees at the entrance sporting their first flowers in spring, and neighbors putting up their lights or flags to mark holidays?

Also, there's always the path to walk, the hills to see - a brief chat with an upstairs neighbor about the days' news or discussing "Did you see how many cars were at that get-together at the Club House?" or "Do they have the fireplace on yet?" Counting the rabbits that jauntily run about, and even being able to recognize the same family of deer as they cautiously, yet bravely make a dash through WoodsEdge to who-knows-where.

The bottom line is, if you want a place to call home in the Corning-Painted Post area, you can't do much better than WoodsEdge. Also, what feels good, is when family visits and they say, "Wow, this is a really nice place!"

So that's what we've come to know about WoodsEdge in five years...half a decade! We hope your experience is just as unique and enjoyable as ours.
